The Degree Audit is found on My Profile > Student. It compares your academic history with your degree requirements. It also lets you (and your advisor) see how your courses and credits would apply to the other degrees your school offers.

The audit is meant to help you make decisions about your courses and program. You might review it and decide to switch degrees.

Using the degree audit

Here's how to compare degrees and understand what the audit is telling you.

- The degree audit starts by showing you the degree you are currently pursuing.
- To see other degrees and options, select from the drop-downs. You can change degrees, catalog years, and specializations. When you make a selection, the audit automatically updates.
- Click Export Degree Audit to create a PDF of the audit; the export will match whatever options you have selected.

- Grey or black items indicate that you have not met the requirement.
- When all of the general requirements have been met, you will see a green notice saying that the requirements have been satisfied.

Degree course requirements are the particular course and grading requirements for the degree. They are organized using course groups, which are sets of courses that serve a particular function in your course of study (e.g. Core Courses or Electives). Courses count toward the requirement when you have completed them: your final grade meets the minimum grading requirements for the course group.

- Each course group leads with a summary of the requirements and whether you have met them. As is customary, green indicates that the requirement has been met!
- If a substitution, waiver, or exception has been applied that affects this course group, you will see a red notice to that effect (see below).
- Individual courses show you the grade and status. The status refers to how the course is used in the degree audit:
 - X credits/hours/courses completed: You have met the minimum grade requirement for this course and earned X number of credits/hours that have been applied to this course group. Courses are also considered completed you have completed an equivalent course or if another course has been substituted for this one.
 - Applied to X: You have met the minimum grade requirement for this course and it is being used in a different course group.
 - X credits in progress: You have not completed this course; when you do, it will be applied to this course group.

- X credits transferred: This course was accepted as a transfer course and has been applied to this course group (or one of the courses in the group).
 - X credits waived: This requirement has been waived for you; you are not required to complete it.
- Unused courses are completed courses that are not included in any of the degree's course groups. They count towards the degree's general requirements but do not count in degree course requirements.

Viewing Courses that Could Count for a Requirement

- Click the “All” button to show all of the courses in the group, those that have been completed, or those that have not been completed, but will count toward fulfilling a given requirement.
